IRAN TESTS NEW MISSILE

2 Iran tested a new precision-guided ballistic missile in defiance of a United Nations ban, signaling an apparent advance in Iranian attempts to improve the accuracy of its missile arsenal. The Islamic Republic has one of the largest missile programs in the Middle East, but its potential effectiveness has been limited by poor accuracy. State television showed what appeared to be a successful launch of the missile, named Emad, which will be Iran's first precision-guided weapon with the range to strike its regional arch-enemy Israel. COSBY TESTIFIES

3 Bill Cosby testified under oath for about seven hours in response to a civil suit brought by a woman who accuses the veteran comedian of sexually abusing her when she was 15, a lawyer for the plaintiff said. It was the first time Cosby testified under oath since accusations of sexual misconduct. REUTERS

GOLF COURSE BOMBS

5 A man has been arrested on suspicion of planting a pair of homemade bombs on a northern California golf course, authorities said. Kevin Hornbuckle, 49, faces possession and manufacturing of a destructive device charges after two bombs were found on the course at the Foxtail Golf Club in Rohnert Park, California, about 50 miles north of San Francisco. Club employees found one of the explosive devices on the 18th hole fairway and took it to the facility's maintenance yard. REUTERS

TURKEY FOCUSED ON ISIS

6 Turkey is targeting Islamic State in investigations of a double suicide bombing in Ankara that killed up to 128 people, officials said on Sunday, while opponents of President Tayyip Erdogan blamed him for the worst such attack in Turkish history.

Conviction in 2012 Southie slaying

Timothy Kostka faces life without parole for the murder of Barbara Coyne.

Timothy Kostka, 26, pleaded not guilty. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

A South Boston man was convicted on first-degree murder charges in the death of 67-year-old Barbara Coyne.

Timothy Kostka, 30, was found guilty of breaking into Coyne's East Seventh Street home, premeditated murder and extreme cruelty in her stabbing death. Kostka will be sentenced on Wednesday. It is expected that Judge Mitchell Kaplan will sentence him to life without parole.

"Given the facts of this case, first-degree murder was the only appropriate verdict," District Attorney Dan Conley said in a statement Friday. "Barbara Coyne was an innocent victim, and the man who killed her deserves nothing less than life in prison."

During the trial, the prosecution showed that Kostka broke into Coyne's house on April 16, 2012, and intended to steal high-end fishing equipment from her son. Coyne encountered Kostka while he went rifling through her jewelry box. Kostka then beat her and slashed her throat before continuing to search the home for more valuables, including about $100 in lottery tickets.

A relative found Coyne and rushed her to Massachusetts General Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

Investigators were able to lift Kostka's fingerprints from the jewelry boxes and an envelope. They also found DNA under the victim's fingernails which belonged to Kostka. Surveillance tapes from a nearby store showed him cashing in the winning lottery tickets.

Witness testimony indicated that he used the winnings to buy drugs.

Boston police scrap, recycle recovered guns

The Boston Police Department has an answer to the question of where guns go when they die.

The BPD showcased the other end of their weapons recovery program at a steel plant in Everett, where guns recovered in street crimes are crushed, melted down, recycled and repurposed.

The ballistics unit shipped more than 200 guns recovered from the streets to the Schnitzer Steel Plant where they were shaped into manhole and sewer covers, the BPD said.

An officer at the plant said in a statement: "It feels good knowing that the weapons destroyed here today won't get a second chance to hurt or harm anybody else in the future."

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS...

TOM FOREMAN

Opinion

Tom Foreman is a CNN correspondent and author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

After what seems like countless cards being played on the Republican side of the presidential race, finally the Democrats are ready to place some bets. Their first debate out in Nevada leads off my three things to watch this week in politics.

1. FIVE-CARD STUD: Expect five people onstage at the first Dem debate, and all eyes will likely be on the "face cards": Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders. But if you're looking for any wild wagering, you can cash your chips in now. Sure, Clinton may lean harder than usual to the left to undercut Sanders' success with liberals, and he may take a short swing or two at her, but neither has anything to gain by going "all in" at this point. They'll be content to ante, raise a few times and split the pot. However, keep an eye on Martin O'Malley and the others. They are way down in the polls, and could whip some surprising cards out of their sleeves in a gamble for attention.

2. WILD CARD: Vice President Joe Biden has had the best poker face in town lately. One moment it looks like he's about to bet big on a late bid for the White House, the next — it seems as if he is bluffing. The possibility that he might jump into the fray even before the debate and secure a spot onstage is enough to give even a Vegas oddsmaker a headache. Until we know if he'll hold 'em or fold 'em, the veep remains worth watching.

3. SNAKE EYES: Republicans may have to call the cops if their dice game gets any more out of control. The fight over who should be the new Speaker of the House is growing messier (if that's possible), and even as cooler heads try to prevail, watch for the hard right to keep up the chaos. They promised an end to politics as we know it, so many love the turmoil.

King memorial plans for Stone Mountain

A monument to black civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. is planned for the top of Georgia's Stone Mountain Park, home to a giant carving depicting three heroes of the pro-slavery Confederate States, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported on Sunday.

The newspaper cited park officials who said the monument to King would feature a replica of the Liberty Bell with the inscription "Let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia," a line from King's 1963 "I Had a Dream" speech. King was assassinated in 1968 in Memphis, Tennessee.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. GETTY IMAGES

The Liberty Bell, housed at Philadelphia's Independence Hall, is a symbol of American freedom.

Formal plans, which include a memorial to black Confederate soldiers, were expected to be announced soon, the newspaper reported. Neither officials with Stone Mountain Park nor the governor's office could immediately be reached for comment.

The park, with family attractions, hiking trails and historical exhibits, is on a site that is considered the birthplace of the modern Ku Klux Klan white supremacist group, which was revived during the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

But Stone Mountain is best known for the "Confederate Mount Rushmore," a 90-foot relief sculpture of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, General Robert E. Lee and General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson. The trio were leading figures of the rebel Southern states that fought in the Civil War of 1861-65.

Many Southerners have long embraced images of the Confederacy, including statues, memorials and the Confederate battle flag, as emblems of regional pride and as a tribute to its Civil War veterans. Critics say they invoke the South's legacy of slavery and resistance to the civil rights campaign. REUTERS

Shia LaBeouf gets arrested in Texas

Apparently Shia LaBeouf can get arrested in this town — assuming this town is Austin, Texas. In what I can only assume is his latest piece of performance art, LaBeouf was nabbed on famed Sixth Street in the music- and party-friendly capital for public intoxication, jaywalking and general rambunctiousness after acting out on the street in the middle of the afternoon late last week, according to TMZ. I've been to Sixth Street, and let me just say it's news to me that drunken behavior can get you arrested there. He must've been giving quite a performance.

And it turns out LaBeouf's brush with the law was carefully timed, as it came just a month after his six-month probation from a March plea deal ended. Doesn't waste time, does he?

Obama has advice for Kanye

Kanye West may have been prohibited from offering Barack Obama any advice on how to run the country during a recent DNC fundraiser, but that doesn't mean the president couldn't give him some. "In case Kanye is serious about this POTUS thing, or as he calls it, Peezy,' I do have advice for him," Obama joked. "You have to spend a lot of time dealing with strange characters who behave as if they are on a reality-TV show. So you've gotta be cool with that. And second, this is the second important tip: Saying you have a beautiful dark twisted fantasy? That's what's known as 'off message' in politics. you can't say something like that. Do you really think this country is going to elect a black guy from the south side of Chicago with a funny name to be president of the United States? That is crazy! That's cray!" What do you think the chances are of any of the current candidates feeling so comfortable using the word "cray"?

HOW IT SHOULD HAVE ENDED/YOUTUBE

How Ant-Man should have ended

Sure, Marvel's "Ant-Man" was a fun lark of a superhero caper, but the folks at How It Should Have Ended have a decent point about how convoluted the plot involved actually is. Maybe things would've been a lot simpler if Hank Pym (Michael Douglas) had just picked up Scott Lang (Paul Rudd) from jail and explained what his idea was from the get-go, but then we wouldn't have had as much fun. "We were going to have this elaborate 'Mission: Impossible' caper with ants, but these two insisted it wasn't necessary," Pym explains. Man, practicality is a total bummer.

Raven-Symoné strikes out at odd names

Former child star and current daytime talk bauble Raven-Symoné is learning the hard way that people with unnecessary accents in their odd names shouldn't throw stones. While discussing a recent study proving that Americans discriminate based on "ghetto" names, Raven-Simoné offered, "I'm very discriminatory against ... those names. I'm not going to hire you if your name is Watermelondrea. It's just not going to happen. I'm not going to hire you."

That '90s nostalgia tour is just an idea — for now

Rumor has it that the Backstreet Boys might be embarking on a tour with the Spice Girls — minus, one assumes, Victoria Beckham. Well, it's not necessarily not happening, but it's also not necessarily actually a solid plan at the moment. "I actually did a little Twitter shout-out to Mel B because we're friends and I said, 'Hey this could be a cool idea. What if we did a Backstreet Boys-Spice Girls tour?'" Nick Carter explains to E! News. "I think this would be that last hurrah — the two big groups from the late '90s. Maybe do a world tour, stadiums. … It's just an idea."

Gina Rodriguez tells all

First comes baby, then comes marriage in Season 2 of "Jane the Virgin."

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

The titular Jane in "Jane the Virgin" had a very full year. She got accidentally artificially inseminated, fell in and out of love with the sperm donor, met her father for the first time and got tangled up with a criminal syndicate headed up by the mysterious Sin Rostro. By the end of the year, she'd given birth, but Sin Rostro had kidnapped the baby. It's a lot for one woman to take on, but Jane always seems up to the challenge, in large part due to the star-making performance of Gina Rodriguez, who plays her. Rodriguez, who says Jane will be "a fierce f—ing mom," is looking forward to exploring what that means for the character.

Brett Dier and Gina Rodriguez in "Jane the Virgin." THE CW

Will we still see a love triangle between Jane, baby daddy Rafael and her old love Michael?
I was actually only given a few spoiler alerts, because they know I'll tell everything, and I really don't know anything. But I do know the love triangle is going to continue. I do also know that Jane's going to get married in Season 2. So who knows! With marriage comes a lot of other things, and who is she going to marry? But one thing that is strong is that motherhood, and her trying to preserve her dreams, is going to be a very relevant topic. Women and men both, when they have children, how do they continue to grow as humans? How do they continue to be normal, and still themselves?

Any dream guest stars?
Oh, we're going to get Luis Guzman. That's definitely going to happen — at least in my head it is. I would love Adam Rodriguez to come play. Freddy Rodriguez would be awesome. I mean, Ricky Martin, Mark Anthony, Enrique Iglesias. Those were a lot of men I just said! I just said nothing but men.

You just want cute boys to come on the show.
Yeah, sure, maybe Jane needs a third love interest!

GETTY IMAGES

This was your first big role, but you settled very quickly into being a strong advocate for the show. What was it that made that responsibility easy for you?
I think it's really easy to be yourself.

So the public is getting the real Gina Rodriguez?
My father used to always say, "If you don't lie, you never have to remember anything."

Is he a big influence on you?
Oh my God, the man is brilliant. Hence, why I'm writing a book about him.

You're writing a book?
"I Can and I Will: Tools My Daddy Gave Me." So I guess Jane is rubbing off on me. Maybe I'll be a writer now.

Do you know what's going to happen between Jane's parents this season? They accidentally got married in the finale.
I don't know anything. I think they all were given spoilers they can share, but they won't tell my ass nothing. Because I'll tell everybody. And they'll be like, that was my spoiler! And I'll be like, "Whatever, what are you going to do? I'm sorry."

Aries You will receive news that will suggest an exciting change. A romantic relationship will figure prominently in your life.

Taurus Current adjustments in the workplace will turn in your favor. Let your superiors know that you are willing to take on additional responsibilities.

Gemini Even if you have a romantic attraction to someone, you should avoid a joint money venture to avoid being left in a vulnerable position.

Cancer Make yourself available to people who helped you in the past. A close friend or family member is in need of your support.

Leo Reach out to an old friend. Keep in mind that although you have history with this person, you would be wise to focus on the past, not future.

Virgo Keep an eye on your budget. Extravagance, overindulgence and emotional outbursts will be your downfall.

Libra Your head will need to win over your heart when it comes to personal choices. Avoid making an emotional or impulsive decision.

Scorpio Offer your concepts to colleagues or clients. Ready yourself to act quickly on a promising prospect that comes your way.

Sagittarius Newfound wealth is within your reach. A settlement, windfall or investment will come your way, but expect conditions to be attached.

Capricorn Self-control and focus will be the key to your success. Keep your emotions in check and dedicate all of your time to your professional goals.

Aquarius If you update your skills, you will find a way to make some extra cash. An unorthodox idea or service could be turned into a profitable venture.

Pisces Your high energy should be put to good use. Participate in lively activities in order to make new friends or find a potential partner. EUGENIA LAST

The Type B boss

ISTOCK

HOW TO GET AHEAD

You can be a nice person and still be an effective leader. Here's how.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Guess what: You can be nice, sensitive and introspective and still be a good boss.

It's a common misperception — even in HR — that effective leaders must be aggressive and intimidating. But those characteristics don't necessarily work, says Victor Lipman, author of "The Type B Manager: Leading Successfully in a Type A World."

Lipman hopes to change the stereotypical image of an effective boss. He talks to us about why sensitive souls tend to be good leaders and offers some tips for dealing with confrontation, conflict and underperforming employees in a nice way.

Use your niceness to build loyalty

"If you break management down to its essence, it's all about getting work done," says Lipman. "And many qualities normally associated with Type Bs — like being more laidback, easygoing, patient, reflective and being good communicators — allow you to build relationships with people and ultimately get people to do the kinds of things you want them to do."

These characteristics also help build loyalty and engagement among employees. "Most people chafe under too much authority, too much control," adds Lipman. "If someone is coming down too hard on you, chances are you're not going to relate really well to it — you might do it because you have to for a while, but it's not really the kind of environment that's going to make you want to come back for more on a regular basis."

Set employee goals at the outset

One way to minimize conflict down the road is to lay out your employees' objectives clearly so that they understand their goals and responsibilities. "Spend a lot of time on the results that you and the organization expect of them — behaviorally, if that's an issue, in terms of productivity, whatever the metrics are — and make sure that these results are as clear and measurable as they can be," advises Lipman.

"And have the employees agree to them," he adds. "What you end up with is this sort of rational standard that you can go back and point to if certain demands aren't being met," he adds. "So when you go to them, it doesn't make you look like the bad guy."

A broken system

"I was a manager at a Fortune 500 company for almost 25 years," Lipman says, citing a culture that often prized Type A personalities over more empathetic ones. "And one of the many things that I saw over the years was that management was not very effective." In fact, a Gallup survey that found only 30 percent of employees are engaged in their jobs — which means a whopping 70 percent aren't. "There's an enormous cost in productivity there," says Lipman. "Over $400 billion a year."

Find out what motivates your employees

Not all workers are motivated by the desire to please their bosses, like it or not. But the good thing about being a communicative and empathetic boss is that you can find out what makes your employees tick — whether it's flexibility, so they can take time off to go to a kid's baseball games or work from home sometimes to care for an elder family member; a bigger office; or, yes, money. "Good managers who take the time to get to understand their employees will start to understand what they really want — and the motivational levers that they can pull to get them to commit to their jobs," says Lipman.

Know you can't avoid conflict entirely

You can be the coolest boss in the world, but you're still going to be placed in uncomfortable situations. Yes, conflict is scary, and no one likes it — even those who tend to deal with it better than others don't necessarily enjoy it. "The notion of management without high standards isn't management at all," Lipman says. "There's nothing that's mutually exclusive between being a decent person and treating people well and also requiring a high quality of work."

Don't skip the college essay

And three tips to crafting the perfect one.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

More and more colleges have made the essay portion of the application process optional. But you should still write one.

"When admissions officers are looking at a group of students whose numbers are all the same they make decisions based on who they imagine would be better members of their community," says Carol Barash, a former college admissions officer and current CEO of Story2, an online platform that helps students write admissions essays. "And the way you show what kind of community member you'll be and the way you bring your personality to life is through your essays."

The good news is that writing an admissions essay isn't as scary as it seems. We asked Barash for her tips.

Start with you

Your essay should reflect on your past, how you've gotten to where you are, and where you see college taking you. "Think of your life as a journey and the key events in them," says Barash. Then pick one of those events and start off with that.

"For the personal statement, you want to take a statement, a moment from your past that has been definitional for you," says Barash. "It doesn't have to be some big huge fancy or prestigious moment."

Tell a story

"Do not write a five-paragraph essay that you would write for your English class — that's just the wrong structure and voice," says Barash. Instead, tell your story out loud, whether to a friend or [recording] into your phone.

"It unlocks your creativity; it starts your essay in a more natural and authentic voice," she explains. "Once you've told it out loud, and you've either audio recorded it or video recorded it, you transcribe it and you use that as the first draft as your essay."

Trust your instincts

Because you want your story to be an authentic expression of yourself, you don't want to have too many people tampering with it. "Every adult you'll talk to will have a different idea — a different 40-year-old or 50-year-old idea — of what your essay should be like," says Barash. "But if you're a high school student applying to college, you're 17 or 18. You don't want to sound like a 40 year old; you want to sound like yourself. So, a lot of advice isn't really helpful in terms of accessing your own voice and your own story and who you uniquely are."

MASSACHUSETTS ONE-STOP CAREER CENTERS

DARTMOUTH'S Geisel School of Medicine and the White River Junction (WRJ) VAMC are seeking a clinical psychologist to join the faculty of Geisel and the Executive Division of the National Center for Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (NCPTSD) in WRJ, VT. The NCPTSD is a Congressionally-mandated, multi-site center for excellence that is dedicated to advancing through research, education, and training the diagnosis, treatment, and social welfare of America's veterans with PTSD and stress-related disorders.

The successful candidate should be a board-certified psychologist with proficiency in the diagnosis and delivery of evidenced-based psychotherapies of PTSD. Candidates will be expected to develop a funded research program, and preference will be given to those with evidence of extramurally funded research. Successful candidates will be expected to work collaboratively with other members of the NCPTSD in clinical, research and educational endeavors, and opportunities also exist for collaborations outside of the NSPTSD at the White River Junction VAMC, the Geisel School of Medicine and neighboring Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center in Lebanon, NH. A faculty appointment commensurate with academic experience will be provided by The Geisel School of Medicine.

White River Junction, VT is located in the Upper Connecticut River Valley on the NH and VT Border. The Upper Valley is a vibrant, academic and professional community offering excellent schools, lively arts, and an unmatched quality of life in a beautiful, rural setting. Amenities associated with urban areas such as Boston MA, Burlington VT, and Montreal QC are all within a few hours' drive.

Dartmouth's Geisel School of Medicine and the White River Junction VAMC/NCPTSD are equal opportunity/ affirmative action employers with a strong commitment to diversity. In that spirit, we are particularly interested in receiving applications from a broad spectrum of people, including women, persons of color, persons with disabilities, veterans or any other legally protected group.

Contact Information:

The applicant should apply online at USAJOBS.gov. A letter of interest, curriculum vitae and three letters of reference should be addressed to Jessica Hamblen, PhD, Deputy for Education for the National Center for PTSD, and sent to Veronica Thurston at veronica.thurston@va.gov.

Pats remain perfect

The Patriots defense led the way Sunday in a 30-6 road romp over the Cowboys.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Cowboys (2-3) were once the most-hated football franchise in the U.S. despite owning the moniker of "America's Team." The Patriots (4-0) have long since assumed the throne of the NFL's most disliked, and Sunday afternoon they continued their "imperial march" of 2015, beating Dallas in their house, 30-6.

The core of the dislike is certainly based off of jealousy, and at AT&T Stadium the Pats gave the rest of the league plenty more reason to be envious. Tom Brady was an efficient 20 of 27 for 275 yards and two TDs, Julian Edelman caught four balls for 120 yards and a touchdown and the Patriots' defense played their most dominant game of the season thus far.

Tom Brady scored the Patriots' first touchdown Sunday on a one-yard run. GETTY IMAGES

The Pats defense forced six Dallas three-and-outs in the first half and did not allow a Cowboys touchdown. Dallas QB Brandon Weeden was held to just 188 yards passing and was picked off by Logan Ryan.

Dallas still had life early in the second half but Pats running back Dion Lewis stomped that out. Lewis made a one-handed catch coming out of the backfield and then juked out what seemed like the entire Dallas defense before entering the end zone to put the Pats up, 20-3, with 9:50 left in the third quarter.

New England got off to a relatively slow start against Dallas as the score was tied, 3-3, after one quarter. Brady was hammered by the Cowboys defense in the first half as they registered five sacks in the first two quarters. The reinstated Greg Hardy accounted for two of them and got to Brady plenty throughout the course of the game. Sunday was the first time Brady was sacked five times in one half for the first time in his career.

But Brady and the Patriots' offense figured things out by the end of the second quarter as they went 55 yards on seven plays in 2:18 to go up 10-3. Brady scored the Pats' first touchdown himself with a patented one-yard, QB TD plunge.

Stephen Goskowski booted the longest field goal of his stellar career, a 57-yarder, to put the Pats up 13-3 heading to the half.

Around the NFL

More scores from Week 5:

Bears 18, Chiefs 17
Jay Cutler dropped the snap, picked it back up, and fired a seven-yard touchdown to Matt Forte to win the game and complete a 14-point comeback for the Bears' second win in as many weeks.

Browns 33, Ravens 30 (OT)
Josh McCown set a new Browns single-game passing record with 457 yards by completing passes to nine different receivers and Travis Coons was good every time Cleveland called on him, including overtime, where he hit his fourth field goal of the game.

Falcons 25, Redskins 19 (OT)
The Falcons stayed undefeated by winning ugly. Julio Jones may have been banged up, but he was still able to dive on top of a Devonta Freeman fumble in the end zone for a touchdown. Freeman himself contributed 197 total yards. Robert Alford had a pick-six in OT to clinch the Atlanta win.

Bengals stun Seahawks in OT, Eagles' '0' finally gets on track

A look around the league as Week 5 wraps up.

LUKE MILLER
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

Marvin Jones and the Bengals edged the Seahawks in overtime Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

For three quarters, it looked like the Seahawks (2-3) were a test Cincinnati wouldn't pass, as the Legion of Boom harried Andy Dalton (30 for 44, 331 yards, 2 TD, INT) and jumped on turnovers to build a 24-7 lead entering the fourth quarter.

Earl Thomas intercepted Dalton, trying to force the ball to A.J. Green in the end zone and had a big return before a penalty on Michael Bennett partially wiped out the return. Bennett later forced a fumble that Bobby Wagner picked up and returned 23 yards for a score. But in that fourth, Tyler Eifert caught his second touchdown pass from Dalton, and Dalton followed that up by running one in for his own. Mike Nugent would then hit a 31-yard field goal with 2:17 left to beckon overtime.

Nugent was called on again in the extra session and delivered again from 42 yards out with 3:26 left in overtime. The Bengals are 5-0 for the third time in franchise history.

Eagles 39, Saints 17
The Eagles shook off another slow start to pile on the points in the second half, where they outscored the Saints, 29-10. DeMarco Murray had his best game yet for the Eagles, finishing with 120 total yards and a score, while Ryan Mathews had 100 yards on just 11 touches. Fletcher Cox sacked Drew Brees three times, twice forcing fumbles recovered by the Eagles.

Bills 14, Titans 13
The Bills finished the game on a 14-3 run to overcome a 10-0 deficit. In a game where offensive yards came at a premium (less than 500 gained combined), Tyrod Taylor had a pair of 20-plus yard scrambles, one of which ended in the end zone for the Bills' first score.

Bucs 38, Jaguars 31
Doug Martin took over the game against the Jaguars with several highlight reel runs, and he finished with 158 total yards and three touchdowns on the day. Blake Bortles had 300 yards and four passing touchdowns of his own for the Jaguars, two of them to Allen Robinson.
